Questions 21-30.

Are you happy? Q21, you aren't, you need to move near friends who are. A new study shows Q22, happiness is infectious and can flow through Q23, groups. And the closer you are to someone happy, the happier you'll be. The study was carried Q24, by the Harvard Medical School. The researchers discovered that a person's happiness is dependent on the happiness of those Q25, them. They collected data on 5,000 adults between 1971 and 2003. Participants were asked Q26, their relatives, close friends, place of residence and place of work. They were also asked questions about Q27, they enjoyed life, and if they felt hopeful about the future. The results were very interesting. The researchers found that those who had happy partners had an 8% higher chance of being happy Q28. And for those with happy children, this increases to 14%. And finally, those with a happy friend who lives less than half a kilometre away are 42% more Q29, to be happy. "Most important from our perspective is the recognition that people are in social networks, and that the health and well-being of one person affects the health and well-being of others," one of the researchers explained. "It Q30, sense that if people around you are happy, that might have an impact on your own happiness." So, in conclusion, the best thing is to have a happy friend who lives less than a kilometre away from you. Do you have one?

Questions 21-30.

“The real intention of the vests is Q21, the government look tough on crime,” said Jane Fletcher, who is concerned Q22, a new plan to make offenders wear bright orange jackets while they are doing community service work. “The government is claiming that this initiative is Q23, introduced to raise public awareness,” said Fletcher, who is a member of Napo (the probation officers’ union). “But this can be done in Q24, ways, for example, by putting a plaque on a wall or in an area after the work is completed.” The fluorescent vests have the words “community payback” written on the back in purple. All offenders doing manual work will Q25, wear them. Ten thousand of the vests have already been ordered. The move has also been criticised Q26, Liberty, a civil rights group. They believe the jackets could make offenders a target for attacks. The director of Liberty, Shami Chakrabarti, said it was a “medieval” scheme. “When someone has lost their self-respect and committed a crime, the Q27, thing to do is demean them further. Q28, the vests is cheap and nasty, and not the sort of thing we want in a civilised country.” But the government is defending the measure. “If we have got to get the public to come forward, give evidence, Q29, crimes and feel confident the British justice system is on their side, they've got to see consequences for criminals,” a government spokesperson explained. “We’ve got to ask ourselves: Q30, side are we on in all of this: the criminals or the public?”

“Q1, the end, I just had to say something. She was supposed Q2 teaching, but she was spending all her time on eBay buying and selling stuff,” said teaching assistant Kate Hustings, who reported primary school teacher Zoe Meadows to the authorities. Hustings, 28, added, “Whenever Mrs Meadows sold Q3 on eBay, she would turn it into an activity for the children and take them to the post office. I had to go too. I didn't think it was Q4 good idea. Mrs Meadows and I were supposed to meet every day from 9 am to 9.15 am to make a lesson plan. But this rarely happened as Mrs Meadows was on the computer. There were days Q5 she would spend up to four hours on the computer. Sometimes, she would just tell her pupils to open their books and get on with an exercise without even explaining it Q6, and I had to go around and help them. Meanwhile, Mrs Meadows was in the corner surfing the internet. It's a disgrace. I tried to say something about it a couple of Q7, but she has got quite a strong character and can be quite intimidating.” After being informed, head teacher Mary Roberts called Mrs Meadows, Q8 taught five to 11-year-olds, in for an interview. “I spoke to Ms Meadows and she admitted using the internet for personal reasons during working hours, and that she could not teach while doing it. She Q9 me she was not aware Q10 the school internet policy. I was surprised as it had been sent to all staff prior to a recent inspection. I believe she abused her position as a teacher by using the internet improperly.” Meadows, 40, later resigned from the 270 pupil school.

Questions 21-30.

Cubism is an artistic movement that emerged during Q21 early 20th century. In Cubist artwork, objects are analyzed, broken up and reassembled in an abstracted form. Instead Q22 depicting objects from a single viewpoint, the artist depicts the subject from a multitude of viewpoints Q23 the subject in a greater context. Cubism is credited for paving the way to the 20th-century Modern art movements. In its various forms, this artistic movement also inspired related movements in literature, music, and architecture. Cubism was pioneered mainly Q24 Pablo Picasso and Georges Braque. It has been considered to be Q25 the most influential art movements of the 20th century. The term is broadly used in association with a wide variety of art produced in Paris Q26 the 1910s and throughout the 1920s. One primary influence that led to Cubism was the representation of three-dimensional form in the late works of Paul Cézanne. It is believed Q27 the term Cubism was coined in 1908 by the French art critic Louis Vauxcelles Q28 he described some of Georges Braque's paintings as 'geometric schemas and cubes'. The impact of Cubism was far-reaching and wide-ranging. Movements Q29 Futurism, Suprematism, Constructivism, De Stijl and Art Deco developed in response to Cubism. Early Futurist paintings hold in common with Cubism the fusing of the past and the present, the representation of different views of the subject pictured at the same time, also called multiple perspectives, simultaneity or multiplicity. Constructivism, on the other hand, was influenced by Picasso's technique of constructing sculpture from separate elements. Q30 common threads between these disparate movements include the faceting or simplification of geometric forms and the association of mechanization and modern life.
